GEP Program Descriptions

The Global Entrepreneurship Program (GEP) promotes entrepreneurship by catalyzing, coordinating and convening partners and U.S. Government agencies around programs and activities to create holistic, entrepreneurial ecosystems in emerging market countries. The six categories of activities include: identifying promising entrepreneurs, training them, connecting them and sustaining their enterprises, increasing access to funding, enabling supportive public policy, and celebrating entrepreneurs’ successes. The GEP seeks to increase the effectiveness of existing entrepreneurship programs in these six areas as well as driving new programs, with the support of partners. Below is a list of current GEP programs, including identification of opportunities/needs for partner participation.

| Developing Angel Networks     | One of the biggest challenges for entrepreneurs around the world is access to early stage, start-up capital. One of the most important sources of capital in developed economies is angel investors and networks. Over 90% of U.S. start-ups receive angel funding, compared to only 7% who receive traditional venture capital investment. Angel capital networks are not prominent in emerging markets but have the potential to unlock new resources for emerging entrepreneurs. The GEP is looking to create these networks in emerging markets to enable local investors to invest in entrepreneurs in their own country. The program will include training for angel networks as well as access to an online platform with support materials and on-going mentoring. | - Identification of angel hosts/qualifying investors
- Funding for translation of materials and online platform
- Provide training for angel networks
- Build pipeline to investment worthy entrepreneurs and start-ups
- Publicizing angel efforts and emerging groups | - Introduce concept of angel investing where it does not exist

| E-Mentor Corps                | Mentoring has been identified as one differentiator between successful and unsuccessful start-ups. Industry experts, consultants, and employees can share their knowledge, but only a mentor can share wisdom on an ongoing basis and offer advice on how to overcome challenges based on their personal experience. The E-Mentor Corps is a Web-based platform which allows entrepreneurs and mentors to meet, share stories and answer questions. | - Provide mentors from organization and introduce new mentors through affiliated networks
- Improve/enhance platform
- Publicize platform and encourage use of services | - Outreach to mentors and entrepreneurs through missions and embassies
- Manage the platform through a host partner | Connect & Sustain                                                                                                                                            |

| Entrepreneurship Delegations | Many entrepreneurs and organizations in developing countries lack the capability to gain high-level exposure to funding sources. Entrepreneurship Delegations are intended to be a bridge between the US and key GEP partner countries and will include 8-12 American investors interested in emerging companies in emerging markets, as well as American entrepreneurs who may serve as role-models and mentors. Delegations meet with GEP Partners as well as a host of other key participants in the entrepreneurship ecosystem such as local investors, incubators, training organizations and relevant government officials. Most importantly, delegations meet individual entrepreneurs, leading some of the most promising start-ups. | ▪ Recommend qualified candidates for delegations

| Business Plan Competitions   | Many new ideas and emerging entrepreneurs are identified through business plan competitions, which are often sponsored by investors and universities. The GEP works with partners to ensure business plan competitions have the highest visibility and entrepreneurs have knowledge and access to these competitions. The participants of business plan competitions sponsored by GEP partners also have the opportunity to be highlighted during official GEP delegations where they can pitch business plans to U.S. investors and entrepreneurs. | ▪ Identify qualified entrepreneurs to enter into business plan competitions

| Entrepreneur-in-Residence (EIR) | The GEP has the unique ability to connect, coordinate, and catalyze organizations through missions and embassies. There is a need for coordination and management of GEP programs and partners at the country level in order to ensure synergies between organizations are captured. The Entrepreneur-in-Residence (EIR) will manage all GEP programs in country and act as a resource for organizations in order to develop a strong entrepreneurial network. | ▪ Suggest qualified candidates

| Entrepreneur Bridge             | In the United States and other developed countries, incubators, accelerators and centers of commercialization support innovators and entrepreneurs as they transition an idea or technology into a viable business concept. These organizations are largely absent in the developing world. Through the Entrepreneur Bridge, the GEP will pair U.S. and local partners to develop the appropriate infrastructure (i.e. accelerators, incubators and/or centers of commercialization) to effectively bring innovation from lab to Main Street in emerging markets. |服 as a U.S. partner for local institutions

| US-Based Boot Camps             | While GEP partners offer critical, in-country entrepreneurship training opportunities, GEP recognizes the need and value of U.S.-based training. This provides emerging market entrepreneurs with increased opportunities for networking, peer-to-peer exchanges, exposure to U.S.-based resources (companies, incubators) and training from world-class entrepreneurs. A specific need exists for intensive entrepreneur “boot camps” including:
Faculty and practitioners-developed entrepreneurship and innovation curricula;
Lectures by entrepreneurs, venture capitalists and angel investors;
Site visits; and networking opportunities. | Sponsor boot camp (both costs associated with training/teaching as well as with travel and student tuition)

<td>Policy Study</td>
<td>Although there are many studies which look at the SME sector and emerging markets, there are very few which focus on challenges and barriers for entrepreneurs as researched by those in-country. The GEP recognizes that local expertise and knowledge of domestic regulations is critical when forming policy recommendations for how to reduce barriers for entrepreneurs and start-ups. The GEP will support studies focused on in-country partners with input from missions and embassies.</td>
