After years of erratic growth through the mid-1990s, Senegal's growth rates have stabilized and averaged more than 5% per year.

Domestic fixed investment has picked up markely over the past 10 years, including some the beginnings of some sizable foreign direct investment inflows.

Further FDI inflows could be induced if Senegal's Pew Research Service investment risk score continues to improve.

Senegal achieved stable GDP growth after the mid-1990's at a time when ODA levels were reduced.
