CONTINENTAL SHELF BOUNDARIES: INDIA-INDONESIA-THAILAND

The Governments of India, Indonesia, and Thailand have signed and ratified a series of maritime boundary agreements which divide continental shelf jurisdiction in the central and southern regions of the Andaman Sea. Earlier boundary agreements were negotiated among Indonesia, Malaysia, and Thailand near the northern entrance to the Strait of Malacca. Burma and Thailand have signed an agreement delimiting their respective continental shelves but they have not exchanged instruments of ratification. A Burma-India boundary in the northern part of the Andaman Sea has yet to be determined.

A chronology of the maritime boundary agreements among India, Indonesia, and Thailand follows:

December 17, 1971  Indonesia and Thailand sign an agreement partially delimiting their common maritime boundary.

July 16, 1973  Above Indonesia-Thailand boundary enters into force (refer to Limits in the Seas No. 81).

August 8, 1974  India and Indonesia sign a continental shelf boundary agreement which establishes a short boundary between Great Nicobar Island and Sumatra.

December 17, 1974  Above India-Indonesia boundary enters into force (refer to Limits in the Seas No. 62).

December 11, 1975  Indonesia and Thailand sign an agreement extending their 1973 boundary northwestward into the Andaman Sea.

January 14, 1977  India and Indonesia sign an agreement extending their 1974 boundary northeastward into the Andaman Sea and southwestward into the Indian Ocean.

August 15, 1977  India-Indonesia boundary agreement enters into force.

February 18, 1978  India-Indonesia boundary agreement enters into force.

June 22, 1978  India, Indonesia, and Thailand sign an agreement establishing a common trijunction point. India and Thailand sign an agreement establishing a boundary that extends northward from the trijunction point.

December 15, 1978  The above India-Thailand boundary agreement enters into force.

March 2, 1979  The 1978 agreement establishing a common trijunction point enters into force.
Map and Measurements

The continental shelf boundaries listed above are depicted on the attached map, which has been compiled from DMAHTC charts Nos. 63025 and 71000 solely for use in this study. The map is for illustrative purposes only and should be used as a general reference. The boundary line segments are shown as rhumb lines which may not necessarily correspond to the lines specified in the treaties.

Measurements calculated for this study used charts and parameters possibly different from those used by the states involved. Thus, the analysis should be viewed as one interpretation of these treaties, and the measurements should not be considered official. All distances are in nautical miles.

Common Trijunction Point

India, Indonesia, and Thailand agreed upon a common trijunction point on June 22, 1978, and the agreement came into force March 2, 1979. The full text of the agreement is attached as Annex 1.

The "Common Trijunction Point" of the three bilateral boundaries, situated at 7º47'00"N, 95º31'48"E, is essentially equidistant from India and Indonesia, but not from Thailand; it is approximately 31.5 miles farther from Thailand. The relationship of this trijunction point to the nearest point on the respective coastlines is as follows:

India-Indonesia

The 1977 boundary agreement between India and Indonesia, which entered into force on August 15, 1977, consists of two segments (see Annex 2 for the complete text of the agreement). The two segments extend their 1974 maritime boundary northeastward into the Andaman Sea to a trijunction point with Thailand and southwestward into the Indian Ocean.

The Andaman Sea segment consists of 5 turning or terminal points and is 86.7 miles in length (see Table 1). The distance from the respective coasts to the boundary ranges from approximately 44 miles at point 1 to about 104 miles at the trijunction point. The Indian Ocean segment extends for approximately 158.9 miles terminating at a point approximately 183 miles from each coast. Combined with the length of the 1974 boundary, the two countries have negotiated a maritime boundary approximately 293 miles in length.

Office of The Geographer
Bureau of Intelligence and Research
The two countries have agreed to create a maritime boundary using the equidistant methodology. As shown in Table 1 each turning/terminal point is essentially the same distance from the respective baseline. The letters given to the turning points in the Andaman Sea segment (K, N, and O) suggest that the countries may have simplified the equidistant line by discarding some turning points (i.e., L and M). It also appears that all islands and rocks have been given full and equal weight in the equidistant calculation.

India-Thailand

The India-Thailand boundary begins at the trijunction point with Indonesia; as noted earlier this point T is 103.9 miles from the nearest Indian basepoint and 132.5 miles from Ko Huyong off the Thai mainland. The first segment of the boundary runs in a northeastward direction before turning in a northerly direction for the remainder of its course. The distance of the boundary is approximately 94.2 miles.
It is difficult to determine a methodology from analyzing the baseline-boundary distances (Table 2). At turning points T, 1, 2, and 3 the boundary is nearer to Indian territory. At turning points 4, 5, 6, and 7 the boundary is closer to Thailand. At turning points 4, 5, and 6 the line is nearly equidistant to the respective baselines. Suffice to say that this is a negotiated line which is agreeable to the parties involved.

Indonesia-Thailand

The Indonesia-Thailand boundary L-A-T, only 76.3 miles in length, is a northwestward extension of their 1971 maritime boundary agreement. Boundary segment A-L is 74.7 miles long while L-T (the trijunction with India) adds only 1.6 miles. Point A is close to being equidistant from the respective baselines, but as the boundary runs toward point L it becomes increasingly farther from Thailand than from Indonesia territory. At point L the boundary is approximately 27.2 miles nearer to Indonesia (see Table 3). Other than to state that this is a negotiated line, it is difficult to identify a methodology.
